A break was made for the fire-escape by some, while others beat a hasty retreat for the roof.

Four persons climbed onto the rear fire-escape from the second fisor and reached the ground in safety. The fifth man who essayed this method of escape was John Dozier. He was very badly frightened, and after he got on to the ladder he trembled so that he lost his grip on the rungs and fell to the areaway, landing on his head on the stone pavement. He was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where it is said that his skull is fractured.

At this juncture the firemen arrived and the remaining tenants were quickly removed to the street without further mishap. Ten of them had fied to the roof, and they escaped through the adjoining house.

The fire did not make rapid headway, and the firemen quickly quenched it, confining it to the basement and ground floor. The damage is said to be around $200.

CAUGHT IN A BURNING BARN.

Three Lives Lost at a Fire in Mercer County, O.

PORTLAND, Ind., Oct. 12 .- A frightful holocaust occurred at the residence of Nathan Greer, a farmer in the Ger-man settlement in Mercer County, eight miles northeast of Fort Recovery, O. last night. Farm employees were engaged in treshing wheat and Elisworth McAfee, aged twenty-seven, and William Greer, as well as a spark from the engine set fire to the dry straw, which flashed up like powder. McAfee and Greer were cornered by the blaze, and met a horrible death by suffocation.

The flames burned the bodles to a crisp, leaving only the charred trunks. Nathan Greer, father of William Greer, rushed into the burning bard in a fruit-less effort to save his son, and was so severely burned that he died this morning. He was sixty-five years old and wealthy.

Smoke Causes Panic in a Seventh | Parkhurst's Latest Letter Revives the Vandewater Story.

on the anti-Tammany ticket. It was familiar to all politicians, and was taken up by the newspapers at the time.

So far as it affected the integrity of Judge Glidersleeve, however, it was a failure, and the explanation made by the Judge Himself knocked the story into a cocked hat.

It was to the effect that eighteen years ago, when Judge Glidersleeve first went on the bench in General Sessions, he secured the appointment as one of the court attendants of Andrew Wheeler Vandewater, the husband of one of his nieces, and that as a return for this favor he exacted a promise from Vandewater that should pay $20 a month out of his sainry to Elmer D. Glidersleeve, a brother of the Judge, who lived at Poughkeepsie.

This money Vandewater claimed that he had paid regularly for a long time, but when he became ill and was unable to perform his duties, he stopped the payments and was removed.

The similarity of this story, which was widely exploited in the newspapers at the time, to the charges made in the letter received by Dr. Parkhurst, led to the general belief this morning that it was the same identical case, and that Vandewater was the writer of the letter.

A reporter of "The Evening World"
